A MESSAGE FROM FATHER MICHAEL . . .

Having celebrated the Fourth of July this past week, our hearts and minds are focused on freedom. We remember and celebrate our nation's founding and gaining independence with gatherings and fireworks because of the great gift to live in the home of the free!

Jesus invites us to celebrate the life of freedom that he alone offers to us in imitation of his relationship with the Father. When Jesus is talking about his humility and his meekness, he is talking about his relationship to his Father, for he lives in complete humble obedience to him. But ever lingering behind this dark saying: "Take my yoke upon you and learn from me" is the Passion of our Lord. Jesus is not saying that the Christian life will be easy. But we will be able to accept a yoke that is dedication to Christ -- a life which should free us from egotism and self-centeredness. The easy yoke that Jesus offers is to follow the commandments of God. They are liberators rather than inhibitors. They help us to realize the freedom we have to follow the ways of God and seek him in goodness.

It really comes down to trusting in the goodness of God and understanding the blessings and benefits of that child-like dependence and trust. There are numerous examples of this kind of trust that we experience in our lives. When a husband and wife marry, they trust one another that their lives will be a blessing together. They do not know what the future holds and what blessings and difficulties they might endure, but they are able to trust one another because of their love for one another. The same situation would be for a priest at ordination. He does not know what lies in the future, but trusts because of his love for God and the Church.

May we be willing to love and trust so that we might rest with God for all of eternity!

God bless you and God bless America!

Father Michael Kaluza
